

Monday 28 June

Dear all

I hope this finds you having had the opportunity to reflect on the huge volume of information you were faced with at the start of the week.

I want to start with the fact that knowing exactly what you want to do next is not yet required. In fact, beyond "I want to go to university/ I don't want to go to university" I think the majority of you remain undecided. That is OK!

Don't forget the UCAS event still runs tomorrow!!

So next week you are back in lessons. The reflection continues with interrogating your matriculation exams. What can you already do? What can you nearly do? What needs your focus first?

There is a realism to these two weeks, given that your matriculation exams will signpost where you set your potential. We want you to always remain ambitious, not to settle for less than your best. But you now need to think about what your best is. It may be that your ambition is well beyond where you are right now. So, are you being over-ambitious? Well before you 'throw in the towel' think about what you can do, no matter how challenging, think about what you control.

You control your behaviour in the classroom
You control your work outside the classroom whilst in school
You control how you use your time outside the school
You control what and when you ask questions
You control how you respond to feedback
You control how curious you are
You control how kind you are towards yourselves and others

You get the picture.
You. Are. Powerful.

Seeing you move from activity to activity this week was inspiring and brought me great joy.

Thank you for being awesome.

See you in lessons next week.

Have a lovely weekend.

Mr Phillips
